Dedication

It has been said that an institution is but the lengthened shadow of a man. Although Dickinson is the oldest law school in Pennsylvania, only a handful of men have held the reins as Dean. Their collective shadows comprise the body and spirit of the Law School. But shadows suggest more than presence; they also give us depth and perspective. These latter qualities were uniquely characteristic of Morris L. Shafer. While his tenure was short, his influence was immense. A highly talented and skilled administrator, Dean Shafer applied insight and often singular boldness to his modern administration of the Law School. The following articles briefly but clearly illustrate the striking impression that he made on his friends, associates and the School. There is a generation of students now who did not know Dean Shafer personally; but daily they partake the fruits of his strength which he so freely gave to us as our heritage.
